There's not one more important thing in investing. Each of the twenty items I discussed in The most important thing is absolutely essential for anyone who wants to be a successful investor. Vince Lombardi, the legendary coach of the Green Bay Packers, is famous for saying, winning is not everything, is the only thing. I have never been able to understand what Lombardi really meant with that statement, but there is no doubt that he considered winning the most important thing. Similarly, I can’t say that an understanding of the cycles is all about investing, or the only thing, but for me it’s definitely right next to the top of the list. Most of the big investors I've known over the years have made an exceptional sense of how cycles work in general and where we are in the current one. This way allows them to do a higher job of positioning wallets for what is ahead. The good cycle time – combined with an effective investment approach and the involvement of exceptional people – represented the great part of the success of my company, Oaktree Capital Management. That is why – and because I find something particularly intriguing about cycle fluctuations – and why where we are in the cycle is one of the things my customers ask for more – and finally because so little has been written about the essential nature of cycles – that I decided to follow The most important thing with a book dedicated entirely to an exploration of cycles. I hope you find it for use. . Some models and events regularly repeat in our environment, affecting our behavior and our lives. Finally I want to return to the most important collaborators, my oaktree co-founders: brown karsh, sheldon stone, richard masson and larry keele. I was honored by adopting my philosophy as a foundation for the oaktree investment approach; they applied it skillfully (and therefore obtained recognition for it;) and helped me add it for the thirty years more than we were associated. As stated in the following, I and Bruce exchanged ideas and we supported almost every day in that period, and my giving-and-take with him, especially in the most difficult periods, played a particularly indispensable part in the development of the approach to the cycles on which this book is based. I also want to thank the people who played important parts in creating this book: my talented editor at hmh, rick wolff; my resource agent, jim levine, which led me to rick; my great friend karen mack goldsmith, who pushed me every turn to make the book more attractive; and my long-term assistant, caroline heald. I want to mention in particular Prof. randy kroszner of the school stand of the university of chicago, which helped to review the chapters of the economic cycle and the intervention of the government with it. ? since knowledge is cumulative, but we never know everything, I look forward to learning more over the years to come. In investing, there is nothing that always works, since the environment is always changing, and the efforts of investors to respond to the environment make it change further. So I hope to know the things in the future that I don’t know now, and I can’t wait to share them in memos and books yet to come. author’s notes: as I did in the mostThing, I want to issue in front of a blanket of blanket for my coherent use of pronouns. It can be a force of habit for someone who started writing more than sixty years ago. I find it much easier and more attractive to write about him. Alternating between him and she seems forced. And I don't like the use of them when the subject is one person. The exceptional women that I had the privilege of working during my career know that I think absolutely as much as professionals and investors as their male counterparties. Furthermore, as in the most important thing, in order to do my points here I take on loan from time to time from the customer's memos that I have written over the years since 1990. I will also borrow from my first book. I could go to the problem of reinventing the wheel and writing on these topics again, but I don't do it. Instead, he will raise the key steps of my book and a memo who think they clearly make their point. I hope it will do it, do not make those who buy this book that have received less than their money. To advance the purposes of this book, occasionally adding some words or eliminating some from the passages that I quote or present paragraphs in an order other than the one in which they appeared in the original. Since they are my steps, I think it is right to do it without noticing it in any case. But I do it only to increase their availability, not to change their meaning or make them more correct with hindsight. And finally as in the most important thing, I do here with a topic that - how to invest in general is complex and involves elements that overlap and cannot be neatly separated in discreet chapters. Since some of these elements are touched in more places, you will also find some cases of repetition in which I include noteworthy quotes from others or quotes from my book and memo who cannot resist the use more than one Please note that when I speak I speak osseccus li ,itsinoisseforp irotitsevni ilg reP .erinev a inna ilgen onoglovs is ehc itneve ilgad oicifeneb omairrart omaireps ehc ilgofatrop i omaibmessa iggo :otipmoc li erinifed ecilpmes Ã .oiraiznanif orutuf li rep enoizaraperp id enoitseuq anu ¨Ã eritsevnI .ion id ortnoc onos ¨Ãtilibaborp el odnauq asefid artson al eratnemua e olovat lad oraned rednerp omaissop e erovaf ortson a onos ¨Ãtilibaborp el odnauq ivissergga ¹Âip itnemitsevni us elranoizisop e essemmocs ertson el eratnemua omaissop ,ilcic i adraugir otnauq rep inoiziutni enucla omaihcilppa es aM .erovaf ortson a ¨Ãtilibaborp el eranilcni id ¨Ãtilibissop al odnarongi omaits ,elorap ertla nI ;ilcic i adraugir otnauq rep ivissap omais ,onaibmac esoc etseuq ehc onam nam otnemitsevni id enoizisop artson al omaibmac non eS .aibmac ilcic ien enoizisop artson al ehc onam nam onaibmac ¨Ãtilibaborp eL ?ilcic i eraiduts ©ÃhcreP .enoissim allad isranatnolla ehc otsottuip sunob nu erinrof :iuq onais ehc otnetnoc iaras ehc orepS .isulcni ehcna oh il ,ilratracs id ecevnI .onodac ehc illetloc ied aruttac al e esrosir elled enoizeles al emoc ,itnemogra irtla itlom us eedi otuva oh ,ottircs oh emoc ,ilcic olos emoc orbil otseuq atlov amirp al rep otipecnoc oh ertnem ,enifnI .onadac ehc aznareps id otroc a ineb odnednev non ,erilas id onavattepsa is ©Ãhcrep esoc ni eritsevni id etnemavisulcse ²Ârelrap orbil otseuq ni ,otnatreP .onos non ehc oroloc a ottepsir olocsunim ¨Ã "onodeissop ehc inoiza elled olleuq arepus ehc elatot erolav nu onnah etroc inoizisop iuc el ¨Ãoic ," otten ni onavort is non o itroc ilotit onodnev ehc enosrep id oremun lI .onos ol etlov elled etrap roiggam al am ,iverb ehc otsottuip ihgnul erpmes onos non irotitsevni ilG .onnariunimid ehc aznareps allen edeissop is non ehc ilotit iverb erednev id oirartnoc la ¨Ã otseuQ .onnarezzerppa ineb itanimreted ehc avitattepsa'llen ognul a odnesse ,omaicid emoc ,o odnenet ,odnatsiuqca aits erotitsevni'l ehc ognoppuS in doing this better than the average investor or overperforming a assigned market benchmark (the performance of which is determined by the actions of all other investors)The type of success is not a small challenge: even if it is very easy to generate medium investment performance, it is quite difficult to perform above average. One of the most important fundamental elements of my investment philosophy is my belief that we cannot know what the future macro in terms of things such as economies, markets or geopolitics has in store. Or, to put it more precisely, few people are able to learn more about the future macro compared to others. And it is only if we know more than others (if there it consists in having better data; to do a higher job in the interpretation of the data we have; to know what actions to undertake on the basis of our interpretation; or have the emotional force required shares) that our predictions will bring to Sur Spel -Computer. In short, if we have the same information as the others, we analyze in the same way, they reach the same conclusions and implement the same way, we should not expect this process to involve an overperforce. And it is very difficult to be constantly higher than these in relation to the macro. So, in my opinion, trying to predict that the future macro is unlikely that it helps investors to obtain higher investment services. Very few investors are known for having overperformed through macro forecasts. Warren Buffett once told me about his two criteria for a desirable information: it must be important and must be known. Although everyone knows that Macro developments play a dominant role in determining the performance of the markets in these days, Macro investors as a whole have shown rather impressive results. It is not that macro does not matter, but rather that very few people can master it. In my view, the greatest way to optimize the positioning of a portfolio at a given point in time is through deciding what balance it should strike between aggressiveness and defensiveness. And I believe the aggressiveness/defensiveness balance should be adjusted over time in response to changes in the state of the investment environment and where a number of elements stand in their cycles. The key word is calibrate. The amount you have invested, your allocation of capital among the various possibilities, and the riskiness of the things you own all should be calibrated along a continuum that runs from aggressive to defensive.Ã Â.Ã Â.Ã Â. When we¢ÃÂÂre getting value cheap, we should be aggressive; when we¢ÃÂÂre getting value expensive, we should pull back. (Yet Again?, September 2017) Calibrating one¢ÃÂÂs portfolio position is what this book is mostly about. ¢ÃÂ¾Â One of the key words required if one is to understand the reasons for studying cycles is tendencies. If the factors that influence investing were regular and predictable¢ÃÂÂfor example, if macro forecasting worked¢ÃÂÂwe would be able to talk about what will happen. Yet the fact that that¢ÃÂÂs not the case doesn¢ÃÂÂt mean we¢ÃÂÂre helpless in contemplating the future. Rather, we can talk about the things that might happen or should happen, and how likely they are to happen. Those things are what I call tendencies. In the investment world, we talk about risk all the time, but there¢ÃÂÂs no universal agreement about what risk is or what it should imply for investors¢ÃÂÂ behavior. Some people think risk is the likelihood of losing money, and others (including many finance academics) think risk is the volatility of asset prices or returns. And there are many other kinds of risk¢ÃÂÂtoo many to cover here. I lean heavily toward the first definition: in my view, risk is primarily the likelihood of permanent capital loss. But there¢ÃÂÂs also such a thing as opportunity risk: the probability of losing on potential gains. We put the two together and see that the risk is the possibility of things that do not go as we want. What is the origin of the risk? One of my favorite investment philosophers, the late Peter Bernstein, said in a number of his newsletter of Economics and Portfolio Strategy entitled Can we measure the risk with a number? (June 2007): Basically, the risk says we don't know what's going to happen. We walk every moment in the unknown. There is a range of results, and we do not know where [the real result is] fall within the range. We often don't know what the range is. Below you will find some ideas (very briefly developed by the full treatment provided in my memo Risk Reviewed again June 2015) that I think to follow directly from the starting point provided by Bernstein. They could help you understand and face the risk. As Elroy Dimson said, the retired London Business School professor, the risk means that more things can happen than they will. For every event in economics, business and markets (among other things), if only one thing could happen - if there could be only a result - and if it were predictable, there would be no uncertainty or risk of course. And without any uncertainty as to what would have happened, in theory we might know exactly how to place our wallets to avoid losses and garnish maximum gains. But in life and in investing, since there can be many results, uncertainty and risk are inevitable. As a consequence of the above, the future should not be considered as a single fixed result that is destined to happen and capable of being predicted, but as a range of possibilities and, with humility, on the basis of an understanding of the respective probability, as a distribution of probability. TheProbably reflect your own vision of trends. Investors, or anyone hoping to successfully face the future, must form the probabilityexplicitly or informal. If it has been done well, such chances will be useful to determine a proper course of action. But it is still essential to keep in mind that even if we know the odds, this does not mean that we know what will happen. The results of a given issue may be regulated by a long-term probability distribution, but as for the result of a single event there may be great uncertainty. Any of the results included in a distribution may occur, although with variable probability, since the process is chosen will be influenced not only by merits, but also by randomness. To reverse Dimson's statement, even if many things can happen, only one will. We may know what to expect on average, but this may not have any connection with what will actually happen. In my way of thinking, the success of investments is like the choice of a lottery winner. Both are determined by a ticket (the result) that is extracted from a bowl (the whole range of possible results). In any case, a result is chosen among the many possibilities. Higher investors are people who have a better sense of what tickets are in the bowl, and therefore for themselves it is worth participating in the lottery. In other words, although higher investors-like all others do not know exactly what the future holds, they have an understanding higher than the average of future trends. Apart from that, I want to add a thought here. Most people think that the way to face the future is to formulate an opinion on what will happen, perhaps through a distribution of probability. I think there are actually two requirements, not one. In addition to an opinion on what will happen, people should have a view of the likelihood that their opinion is otnemitsevni otnemitsevni id emagel otanimreted nu ,oipmese da(aicudif elaiznatsos noc itsiverp eresse onossop itneve inuclA .atterroc I'm sorry.
